Franco Leaves the Hospital, Faces a Long Convalescence

MADRID, July 30 (UPI).-Generalissimo Francisco Franco left the hospital today to start what medical sources said would be a long convalescence from a circulatory allment which caused him to hand over his powers as chief of state temporarily to Prince Juan Carlos.

The area controlled by op-posing forces, in Cyprus this evening will but be extended. The agreement issued on all forces. Supported on either side by doctors and looking frail, the 81-year-old Franco was helped into a limousine. He smiled faintby and waved to a sidewalk troyd of wellwishers who applauded and shouted "Franco, Franco, Franco."

Doctors said he had lost 10 pounds since entering the hospital three weeks ago for treatment for thrombo-bl inflation of veins in his right thigh, at one time complicated by intestinal bleeding. His normal weight is about 125 pounds.

His doctors said Gen. Franco was leaving the hospital "in full recovery" but not yet cured. While completing his recovery,

Gen. Franco will be facing a hos of political problems, many of them connected with the crisis brought on by his sudden illness. One problem, sources close to the government said, was if and when to take back his powers from Juan Carlos, 36. Persons connected with the prince's advisers said he was exercising little more than purely ceremonial functions and was not overly happy with the situation.

Gen. Franco was driven to his El Pardo Palace residence north of Madrid Members of his family said he will spend about a week there before traveling to his ustomary summer retreat in Galicia, his native province, in northwest Spain, where he will

Senate Acts To Establish Trial Rules

By Spencer Rich

WASHINGTON, July 30 (WP) -The Senate, in its first formal action to prepare for a trial of President Nixon if the House of Representatives votes impeachment, yesterday ordered the Rules Committee to decide by Sept. 1 whether trial procedures should be updated.

The action was taken by voicvote after Senate Democratic and Republican leaders agreed at a two-hour closed meeting that trial planning should go at ead, now that the House Judiciary Committee has approved impeachment charges. Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, D-Mont, said most of the impeachment trial code is decades old, and the committee should review both the code and the precedents from earlier trials. such as the 1368 impeachment trial of President Andrew Johnson, to determine whether some new procedures are needed in view of the development of legal theory since then.

Sen. Mansfield also announced that within a few days a resolution will be introduced and referred to the committee allowing live television coverage of a trial of President Nixon. Blunt Reply said that a civil service law, under which a president would get $62,500 yearly in a special pension, plus $96,000 a year for staff and office expenses, includes in it a specific proviso that these payments cease if the President removed from office by the Senate. But whether his regular civil service retirement benefit based on prior service in the House and Senate and as vicepresident would also cease is unclear and conceivably requires some study.

An important question for the committee may be what rules of evidence should be followed-strict criminal or civil rules on admissibility? Or should the Senate simply reserve for itself the right to determine on a dayto-day basis what evidence should be admitted.

On the basis of statements by White House supporters at the House Judiciary Committee hearings, it seemed likely that the President's forces would want to install strict criminal procedure rules, making it harder to obtain a conviction. Others said a Senate impeachment trial is not the same as a court proceeding. A fight over this issue is conceivable.

Another procedural question which could come up if the trial (Continued on Page 3, Col 1)

Nixon Surrenders 20 Tapes To Sirica as Court Ordered

By Robert Siner

WASHINGTON, July 30 (IHT). -President Nixon, in compliance with last week's order of the Supreme Court, surrendered 20 tapes of presidential conversations today to Judge John Sirica for eventual use in the Watergate cover-up trial.

The tapes, along with an analysis and index of their contents, were brought to the court by presidential attorney James St. Clair shortly before the 4 p.m. dead-

Last Thursday the Supreme Court, in an 8-to-0 decision. rejected Mr. Nixon's refusal to turn over 44 tapes of 64 presidential conversations subpoenaed by special Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski, and ordered that they be surrendered as soon as possible. But under a compromise tween Mr. Jaworski and Mr. St. Clair, the White House was to turn over some of the tapes by 4 n.m. today and on Friday Mr. St. Clair was to report to Judge Sirica on how quickly the remaining tapes might be surrendered. Mr. St. Clair assured Judge Sirica that "a significant por-tion" of the remaining tapes would be ready by Friday.

Claims of Privilege Even though the Supreme Court rejected Mr. Nixon's blanket claims of privilege, the White House said that specific claims of privilege on grounds of national security and confidentiality would be made on "a few" of the

This material will be turned over to the special prosecutor for use in the proceedings against six former officials of the administration and of the Nixon re-election campaign accused in the cover-up. The trial is scheduled to start Sept. 8. The remaining material will be returned, under seal, to the White House.

Judge Sirica will hold open hearings on the submission of the tapes, after which he will decide if the White House progress in monitoring, indexing and analyzing the tapes is satisfactory. In addition the judge may hear arguments on specific claims of privilege although this is more likely to take place behind closed

The tapes surrendered today include conversations that the President had with his former aides, H R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman, in March and April, 1973, when the cover-up was beginning to come apart.

On May 1, the White House moved to quash the subpoens and on May 20 Judge Sirica rejected the White House motion and ordered that the tapes be turned over to him with any claims of privilege or confidentiality. The judge ruled that he would make the final determination on the validity of such The White House refused to comply and instead took the question to the Court of Appeals but Mr. Jaworski went directly to the Supreme Court, asking it to bypass the Court of Appeals. The high court agreed and ruled against Mr. Nixon. Later that same day, Mr. Nixon announced he would comply with the Supreme Court order. The President spent most of this morning and part of the afternoon completing the review to determine which portions of the material might be privileged. White House spokesman Gerald Warren told newsmen that the President had decided to file claims that Mr. Jaworski be denied parts of tapes on grounds that they involved national security or executive privilege.

Fourth Item, On Cambodia, Loses, 26-12 By Fred Farris

WASHINGTON, July 30 (IHT). The House Judiciary Committee approved two more articles of impeachment against President Nixon last night and today but tonight rejected a fourth article.
This article, accusing the President of misleading to: nation and Congress about the secret bombing of Cambodia in 1969-71, was defeated, 26-12, with all 17 Republicans voting "no."

Article II, which accused the President of repeated misuse of his powers to violate the consti-tutional rights of citizens, passed 28-10 last night when the committee's second-ranking Republi-can, Rep. Robert McClory of Illinois, joined six party colleagues in approving the measure.

This afternoon, Rep. McClor.

ample of 'stonewalling' is right here" in the White House refusal to give the committee the evidence it subpoensed in pursuit of its constitutional role in the inneachment process. Article III declared that Mr.

Nixon "has failed without lawful cause or excuse to produce papers authorized subpoenas issued by the committee.' The President, by his refusal, assumed "to himself functions and judgments necessary to the exercise of the sole power of impeachment vested by the Constitution in the House of Representatives." the panel charged.

In last night's approval of Article II, seven Republicans joined the committee's 21 Democrats in voting "aye." Today only two Republicans joined 19 Democrats in approving Article III. Two Southern Democrats—Rep. Walter Flowers of Alabama and Rep. James Mann of South Carolinavoted against it.

Today's debate, much shorter than the extended consideration given the far broader first two articles was almost anti-climactic. Saturday's committee vote adopting Article I automatically insured the great House debate next month.

White House View Despite widespread anticipation that the House will impeach the President and send the issue to the Senate for trial, Mr. Nixon's spokesmen continued to say that the President is sure the House will reject unpeachment. Rep. McClory today was joined by only one Republican, Rep. Lawrence Hogan of Maryland, in

10 Dogs Being Trained to Nip Spread of N.Y. Subway Graffiti

By Edward C. Burks

NEW YORK, July 30 (NYT) .- The New York Metropolitan Transportation Authority is having attack dogs trained to chase vandals who paint graffiti on subway cars in the outdoor storage yards of the subway system. In the sprawling yards of the upper Bronx, the first two dogs are going through their paces, learning to dodge the third rail. At a prisk command in German "Fass," which translates into "Fetch," or better, "Get him!") they spring into action sinking their teeth into the padded arm shields worn by their handlers. David Yunich, the transportation agency's chairman, said he was "very, very fearful" of adverse public reaction, especially if a trespasser were bitten. But believing that the public is as fed up with the smeared cars as he is, he said: "Unless we get rid of the graffiti on the cars, it's no use telling the passenger he is going to have a clean ride." The plan calls for using 10 dogs, assigning a pair to each of five yards in several boroughs and working them in two shifts to cover the nighttime hours. They are to be on a leash and always accompanied by their handlers. A starting date has not been decided on. The decision to use dogs is the toughest response yet to the graffiti-makers, most of whom are believed to be teen-agers. They have had such free rein that hundreds of cars are stained with paint designs-many of them considered artful. In many cases, even the windows have been painted,

The biggest designs are sprayed on with aerosol cans. Vandals sometimes work 30 to 45 minutes, apparently unmolested in covering an entire side of a car.

Greece Starts Purge of Junta's Top Civil Aides ATHENS, July 30 (AP).—Pre-mier Constantine Caramaniis consolidated his hold over the country's administrative forces today by starting a general house-clean-ing designed to remove top civil servants appointed by the former military rulers since 1967. He dismissed the general secretaries of all ministries and all but four of the 54 nomarchs, or provincial governors. The decision was made at a cabinet meeting last night. The ousted nomerchs were being replaced by general directors of their bureaus. New ministry general secretaries will be appointed by ministers. The cabinet, of which only two members are former military men, was reliably reported to have voted unanimously for the purge. The cabinet also decided to remove all mayors of cities and towns, but at a later date. The two former military inen the cabinet-retired Adm. Ioannis Mineos, head of the Merchant Marine Ministry, and retired Army Gen. Solon Ghikos. Gen. Ghikos retired as chief of the Supreme Military Command Council in 1956. The same year he was elected to parliament as a member of Mr. Caramanlis's right-wing National Radical Union party.

The 29 other members of the cabinet are former politicians representing right and center parties. Many of them are economists and university professors.

Status of Gizikis Government spokesman Pana-

ghiotis Lambreas so far has failed to clarify whether President Pheidon Gizikis, a general and the only active military member of the government, will remain in office. Gen. Gizikis was installed as president last November.

Asked by newsmen what role Gen Gizikis had played since the junts surrendered power to Mr. Caramanlis, Mr. Lambreas replied: "Glzikis remains simply as a made it clear that he is running dictated by Mr. Caramanlis. Gen. Gizikis was not at last night's cabinet session and he is not expected to preside over a cabinet meeting unless specifically requested to by Mr. Caramanlis.

Role Not Prominent During the military regime's ruling days, Gen. Gizikis did not have a prominent role. He usually toured the provinces, refraining from making political speeches, and endorsed decisions reached by the junta. Reports circulated two months ago that Gen. Gizikis was eager to resign, but the regime's strongman, Brig. Gen. Dimitrios Ionnidis, refused to let him go because he regarded such a move as detrimental to the military's image.

Mr. Lambress said that Gen. Gizikis's position was uncertain at the moment and that the govcrament would probably decide whether to replace him with a civilian after the Cyprus crisis was over.

Saigon Pours Fresh Troops Into Fighting Near Danang

DANANG, South Vietnam, July 30 (AP).-Hundreds of tank-led government reinforcements pour-ed into the embattled northern coastal region today and retook one of seven outposts overrun yesterday by Communist forces around Thuong Duc, below Danang, field reports said. Fighting in the region ended its second week, and the Sargon military command said it posed no immediate threat to Danang. South Vietnam's second-largest city, with half a million people.

Thuong Duc was among at least a half dozen towns along the northern and central coasts that were being seriously threatened by what Western diplomats termed "strategie raids and a series of high points" designed to strain South Vietnam's already Irail economy.

Military sources in the field said government reinforcements reaching an outpost about 3.5 miles south of besieged Thuong Duc found a number of dead and wounded government soldiers Portuguese government officials. from its initial 50 defenders.

North Vietnamese gunners positioned on nearby hills im.nediately engaged the government troops with heavy shelling, the sources said.

In Cambodia, meanwhile, government troops have linked up with surrounded Muk Kampul by breaking rebel resistance at the last of three blocked bridges leading to the isolated town on Route 7 north of the capital.

No casualty figures were given in the fighting, which lasted all afternoon yesterday, until government armor and infantry forces broke through a rebel ring around a bridge outside the town.

Fighting also continued in the Bye region, where intelligence sources said Klimer Rouge forces adjacent to Route 7 had been infiltrating a wedge-shaped piece of land between the Tonle Sap and Mekong Rivers.

Insurgent forces continued their 2 1/2-month siege of tiny Kompong Sella, 70 miles southwest of Phnom Penh on Highway 4.

Cambodia Bombing Data Released

By House Investigators

By Michael Getler

WASHINGTON, July 30 (WP). The House Judiciary Committee staff yesterday released a lengthy history of secret U.S. bombing in Cambodia between 1969 and 1971, but offered no conclusions that President Nixon had misled Congress by concealing the largescale air attacks

The "statement of information" by the staff came as a small group of committee members decided to recommend to the full committee another article of impeachment for the President's alleged responsibility in false reports to Congress on the raids and misleading public statements con-cerning U.S. actions in Cambodia. The article was rejected by the committee today.

The question whether to include the Cambodia bombing issue in the impeachment charges was a sensitive subject for several

Even those who supported its inclusion acknowledged that the article had virtually no chance of passage. Some even argued that if the committee rejected the article-as it did-it would put the committee in the position of condoning the President's actions on the bombing and false reports to Congress.

Supporters of the recommendation argued that the committee debate was an excellent place to air the issue publicly.

Virtually all of the material in the staff report has been made public before, but never in one place. It reiterates that between March 18, 1969, and May 1, 1970. the United States carried out 3,695 B-52 strikes inside Cambodia, raids that only a handful of people in Washington ever knew

After the two-month-long U.S.-South Vietnamese invasion of Cambodia in May, 1970, other raids by U.S. planes were carried out, with false reports on where the actual targets were located. The report was meant to help members assess the issue and draws no conclusions. It points out that "the staff's examination of all available material did not reveal any request by the administration for funds or any appropriation for any American military activity in Cambodia between March, 1969, and August, 1973." During that period, the United States carried out 170,000 bombing sorties and dropped some 540,000 tons of bombs in Cambodia. The issue of bombing in Cambodia without any specific request to Congress for funds was a major point raised in Senate hearings last year, when the raids were disclosed publicly for the first time.

The administration has argued

2 Charged in Use Of Business Funds

WASHINGTON, July 30 (AP). -Two partners in a computermail firm were charged today by Watergate prosecutors with misdemeanor counts of aiding and abetting the donation of $82,000 in corporation money from milk producers to the campaigns of Democratic Sens. Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota, James Abourezk of South Dakota and others.

The partners, John Valentine and Norman Sherman, were named in a criminal information filed in U.S. District Court in St. Paul, Minn, and announced at the office of the Watergate special prosecution force in Washington.

The Valentine-Sheyman partnership furnished computerized mailing lists paid for by corporate funds of the nation's largest dairy cooperative, Associated Milk Producers Inc., and used in a number of Democratic campaigns during the 1972 elections, the prosecutors charged.

The former second-in-command of the milk producers, David Parr, pleaded guilty recently to a felony conspiracy count in connection with the corporate pay-

Geyser on Mid-Atlantic Floor Yields Pure Manganese Ore

By Walter Sullivan

PONTA DELGADA, the Azores Project Famous has been to ob-July 30 (NYT),-French participants in the French-American expioration of the Median Valley of the Atlantic Ocean believe they have discovered a geyser whose eruptions generate almost pure manganese ore.

One of their deep-diving sub-mersibles has grabbed a sample of material from the flank of this small, cone-like feature, and brought it to the surface for study. It has been identified as a form of manganese of the type found previously in several dredge hauls along the mid-Atlantic ridge. The area being explored is 220 miles southwest of here. The finding has generated considerable excitement among members of the French-American

Mid-Ocean Study, better known as Project Famous, whose goal is the direct exploration of the midocean Rift Valley lying some 9,000 It is believed that the valley

From observations elsewhere, it had been suspected that eruptions. through the floor of that valley bring up metals from deep within the carth. As hot water percolates through rock that has risen in this process, according to current theory, it extracts the metals and deposits them as ores either within cracks in the rock or via bot springs and geysers that spread the metal on top of the sea floor, later to be buried by sediment.

It is believed that many ores now found on land, notably the great copper deposits on the is-land of Cyprus, originated in this manner. Hence, a major goal of

So far, roughly 25 dives have been made by the Archimede and the Cyana of France, and the Alvin of the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution of Massachasetts. Farlier this year, U.S. Navy scientists reported finding manganese and bottom water as temperatures slightly above nor-mal along the mid-Atlantic ridge, south of the area being explored by Project Famous.

The final series of dives are planned for the next two weeks. along the Median Valley, the Woods Hole research ship Knorr has been towing a "fish" a short distance above the ocean floor carrying a temperature-measuring "pinger." Its signals continnously indicate clight variations in water temperature. Early observations of such variations produced some hopes that a hot spot had been found, but return visits failed to confirm this.

According to American specialists in mineralogy, the chemistry of the manganese samples previously brought up from the Median Valley is puzzling. It clearly differs from that of manganese nodules that litter the sea floor in many areas.

But some say that inclusions of trace elements in the samples from the Rift Valley are not what would be expected from a hot water extraction process.

Ford Refuses to Rule Out Connally as Rival in 1976

By Jules Witcover

SAN FRANCISCO, July 30 (WP).-Vice-President Ford, now considered the most likely Republican presidential nominee in 1976, declined yesterday to rule out former Treasury Secretary John Connaily as a competitor on grounds of Mr. Connally's indictment in the Nixon milk fund controversy.

"I presume John Connally is innocent like any other American until he has his day in court." Mr. Ford told reporters as he continued his swing around the country proclaiming the inno-cence of President Nixon in the

"I believe John Connally should be given the same treatment as any other American," the Vice-President said. "I think his political chances will depend on what happens when he is brought to trial. It would be tracic if a man was precluded, in my judgment, from being a candidate predicated solely on an indictment."

[In Washington, a White House spokesman, asked if Mr. Nixon had a comment on Mr. Connally's indictment, said: "In this matter as in any indictment, the President and everyone here at the White House has a belief in a fundamental tenet of our system of justice, and that is that any man or woman is presumed innocent until proven guilty."]

News of the Connally indictment arrived during Mr. Ford's visit here, ostensibly to address the National Urban League convention but obviously to rally public and Republican party support to the President.

In his speech to the league's 64th annual convention Mr. Ford. after supporting Mr. Nixon, remarked that the heavy concentration of blacks in the Demo-eratic party "will not produce good government, it is not good

Newsman Given 5-Day Term for Guarding Sources

LOS ANGELES, July 30 (AP). -After a three-year court fight over his refusal to reveal news sources, reporter William Farr was sentenced yesterday to five days in jail and fined $500 by a judge who said he regretted he could not make the sentence

The sentence was the maximum permitted under an Appellate Court ruling that Mr. Farr could not be forced to serve the open-ended jail term originally imposed for contempt of court. U.S. Weapons Bill Passes in House, Is Sent to Senate

Wherefore Richard M. Nixon,

Following is the text of impeachment Article III proposby Rep. Robert McClory. R-Ill. as amended by Rep. Ray Thornton, D-Ark,, and adopted by the committee today. Article III

In his conduct of the office of President of the United

crary to his oath faithfully to execute the office of President of the United States and, to the best of his ability, preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution of the United States, and violation of his constitutional duty to take care that the laws be faithfully executed, has Tailed withou, lawful cause or excuse to produce papers and things as directed by duly authorized subpoenas issued by the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives on April 11, 1974, May 15, 1974, May 30, 1974, and June 24, 1974. and willfully disobeyed such subpoenas. The subpoenaed papers and things were deemed necessary by the committee in order to resolve by direct evidence fundamental factual questions relating to presidential direction, knowledge or approv-al of actions demonstrated by other evidence to be substantial the President. In refusing to produce these papers and things Richard M. Nixon, substituting his judgment as to what materials were necessary for the inquiry, interposed the powers of the presidency against the lawful subpoenss of the House of Representatives, thereby assuming to himself functions and judgments necessary to the exercise of the sole power of impeachment vested by the Constitution in the House of Representatives. In all of this, Richard M.

Nixon has acted in a manner contrary to his trust as President and subversive of constitutional government, to the great prejudice of the cause of law and justice, and to the manifest injury of the people of the United States.

Wherefore, Richard M. Nixon by such conduct, warrants impeachment and trial, and removal from office.

TAP Jet Credit By Ex-Im Bank

WASHINGTON, July 30 (AP). -The U.S. Export-Import Bank announced yesterday that it has sutnorized a credit of $25.8 million to support an $86-million sale of U.S. jet aircraft to Portugal.

The sale involves two Boeing 727 and two Boeing 747 planes. The direct credit of $25.8 million will finance 30 per cent of the total U.S. costs, the announcement said. A credit of $43 million from private sources not yet designated will finance 50 per cent of the total U.S. costs.

Transportes Aereos Portugueses Sarl (TAP) of Lisbon will make a cash payment of the balance -30 per cent or $172 million.

The singer's doctor, Anthony Greenburg said earlier. "I think the postmortem will probably show that she died as a result of choking on a sandwich while lying in bed. She was a very big lady and I could not rule out the possibility of a heart attack." Miss Elliot, who stood 5 feet 5 inches, weighed 238 pounds.

Police said that an inquest will be held at the Westminister coroner's office tomorrow.

Miss Elliot, who in the 1960s was the lead singer of The Mamas and The Papas group, was found cead yesterday in the six-room London apartment she occupied during engagements in Britain.

Do MacLeod, the singer's secretary, said that she found the body slightly propped up in her couble bed. She said that the television was on and a ham sandwich and soft drink were beside her pillow.

"She had been dead for a considerable time before her body was found," Dr. Greenburg said.

Finished Engagement Miss Elliot finished a twoweek engagement at the Palla-dium Saturday night and was to start a tour of Britain.

Guards Walk Out Over Conditions In French Jails

PARIS, July 30 (AP).—Civilian prison guards went on strike in various parts of France today to protest both their working con-ditions and public sympathy with rioting prisoners.

France's major labor unions approved the strikes and issued a joint statement calling for urgent prison reform measures—including tighter security and increases in the prison staffs. Four prisoners died in prison riots throughout France during the last two weeks. In the Fresnes prison near Paris, one of France's largest penal establishments, military gendarmes took over the surveillance of the prisoners. A spokesman for the guards told newsmen, The liberalization measures which have already gone into effect-such as permission for the prisoners to own watches and transistor radios-have made our conditions intolerable. We have to be doubly alert because the watches and radios are being used to make escape tools of various

Watered Autonomy

The government in New Delhi has run the rest since it deposed Sheikh Abdullah in 1953 and wa-tered down the autonomy promised him when Kashmir entered the Indian union in 1947.

With Pakistani encouragement, Sheikh Abdullah has been fighting since then-both in and out Indian jails—for restoration of autonomy. He has sought a plebiscite to gauge whether the 80 per cent Moslem population of Kashmir wants to be part of In-dia or Pakistan, or independent. But the 68-year-old sheikh recently abandoned his plebiscite demand in a concession for continuing talks between his representatives and those of Mrs. Gandhi. Mirza Afzel Beg, the sheikh's lieutenant, said in an interview that the sheikh is now concentrating on getting the Indian government to guarantee a return to Kashmir's internal autonomy enjoyed before 1953 when the New Delhi government exercised its power only over defense, communications and foreign affairs.

"If it is impossible to have a plebiscite as originally sugge the UN Security Council, and there are unreconcilable difficulties, then we must find an alternative way of finding out the will of the people," he added. Mr. Beg said that Kashmir's pro-autonomy faction now would settle for participation in free Indian elections instead of a plebiscite. This has led Pakistan ann die-hard forces in Kashmir to accuse Mr. Beg and the sheikh of selling out. Within Kashmir, a rebelautonomy movement has sprung up to fight any agreement the sheikh makes with the Indian government, and Pakistani Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto told an interviewer recently that, whatever pact is signed between the sheikh and Mrs. Gandhi, "we will not acquiesce in it."

the feed. The figure reported by UPI yesterday came from unofficial Dutch sources.

CPC-Europe said yesterday that "shipping error" on its part had led to the introduction of an ingredient containing mercury into the artificial milk.

A CPC-Europe spokesman said today that "in regard to Italy, 50,000 calves is the figure which came into the public channels as a possible total of the number of calves which may have been fed the animal feed, not the total number of calves which has been destroyed. The presumed number of calves which have died or been destroyed in Italy is believed to be somewhere in the range of the figures for Holland."

Sadat Kin Denies Inciting Libyans

CAIRO, July 30 (UPI). -Mahmoud Abu Walia. Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's brother-in-law, has condemned the Libyan government of Col. Moamer Queditain as a "fascist regime" but denied that he had stirred up tribes living along the Egyptian-Libyan border against the colunel's rule.

Mr. Walia, a National Assembly deputy, published a statement in the newspaper Al Akhbar yesterday to rebut Libya's charge, contained in a "strongly worded" protest. He said he was related to tribes of the area by family ties that "probably date back be-iore Col. Qadhali himself was horn" and had gone 'here tor a fighting and a Lebanese pedes-trian slain by a stray bullet.]

Lebanese policemen cordoned off the area-but did not interfere as government officials. Phalangist and commando leaders held several meetings to establish a truce.

Collect Weapons

Phalangist militia commanders went around Dekwaneh today collecting machine gurs and machine pistols from their followers, while guerilla vehicles toured the refugee camp with loudspeakers instructing the commandos to cease firing:

The truce followed a conference at the Ministry of Interior head-ed by Premier Takieddin Solh, with security chiefs, the Phalang-ist party president, Pierre Gemavel, and the guerrillas' military commander, known as Aboul Zaim.

Because of the fighting Mr. Solh postponed a visit to Libya he had scheduled today.

The guerrilla chief. Yassir Arafat, earlier in the day-telephoned Mr. Gemayel from Damascus and expressed hope that the fighting would be quickly ended. Mr. Arafat had gone to the Syrian capital to board a ial Soviet plane to Moscov for his talks with Soviet leaders.

Fighting on Saturday

The new outbreak of fighting followed an incident Saturday in which one guerrilla was killed and a Phalangist militia leader seriously wounded at Dekwaneh.

A deep mistrust is behind the tension between the two sides. The Christian-dominated Phalangist party has a total member-ship of about 50,000 and a militia of 5,000. The right-wing party has been calling for re-establishment of government control over the 15 refugee camps in Lebanon. The camps are dominated by the guerrillas and have a population of about 90,000.

Constant Vigilance

In response to the skepticism that mingled with the joy of Greeks-and of their friends -at the return of civilian government to Athens, Premier Caramanlis has assured his people that the military have promised to return to their duties and not to interiere with the disenarge of his. This is good: nevertheless, there is bound to be continuing consideration of the possibility that the soldiers have simply given the civilians a chore that they felt incapable of discharging with credit, and are standing in the wings, ready to reassert their power should Mr. Caramanlis full to find a solution of the Cyprus problem suitable to them-or even one that is suitable, if it removes a critical issue.

Armies are likely to act that way, after they have enjoyed authority and find that its exercise has led their nation into trouble. The German Army did. after its defeat in 1918, refusing to take any responsibility with respect to the burdensome Treaty of Versailles, and blaming their disasters on that powerful myth, the "stab in the back." while at the same time seeking to rebuild its own political strength during the Weimar Republic. What the Greek Army has done before.

it may do again. The answer to the threat of military usurpation of governmental office is not easy or swift. A long tradition of civilian dominance has made it possible for Britain to assert, as an unquestioned assumption, that (certainly in time of peace) a soldier "is only a civilian armed in a particular manner." France has had a more checkered history with respect to its relations with the army, but since the downfall of Napoleon III the civilians have triumphed—over the Boulanger movement, the military machinations in the Dreyfus crisis, the revolt over Algeria.

In the United States, the tendency to whittle the armed forces down to the bare bones after nearly every war has kept the military distinctly subordinate to the elected civilians. This was, of course, less true after World War II, when the cold war strengthened the influence of the forces. And there is a further element of importance today: The fact that the highest elected official in the United States is also the commander in chief. The problem here is less that the military will boss civilians, than that the President may use the military-or at least his military title-to exact conformity to his will in contravention of the laws.

That is one of the issues that has been before the U.S. House Judiciary Committee: The violation of the constitutional guarantees against unlawful search and seizure in the name of national security. By comparison with the acts of a truly military regime -such as the seizure of the Peruvian press by its soldier leaders—the acts cited against President Nixon may seem trivial. But the essence of a tradition of civilian government is its maintenance as such in time of peace, and to maintain it truly requires, as the adage states, "constant vigilance." Whatever the outcome of the impeachment process in Washington, that vigilance is at least clearly in evidence.

The Law of the Seas

a patchwork, is being laid upon the world's oceans for the first time—at the Law of the Sea Conference in Caracas. The developing consensus would extend the territorial sea of coastal states to 12 miles; establish an "economic zone" out to 200 miles in which coastal states would, with certain exceptions. control fishing and mining; and create an international program of "regime" outside the 200-mile line to mine the deep seabed as the "common heritage" of mankind. Sharp disagreements still exist among the 149 participants at Caracas and there is no assurance that the full text of a treaty will be reached in this summer's session. But it is clear that the old system-or nonsystemof rights and responsibilities which has prevailed on the high seas is gone. The very concept of "high seas," open equally to all, is buckling as particular nations assert sovereignty or special rights over areas further and further from their shores. and as the international community collectively asserts certain kinds of authority over areas further out. If a country holding an offshore island can claim a 200-mile economic zone around it, for instance, then the whole of the Mediterranean and Caribbean Seas and much of the Pacific Ocean become subject to national claims. To make the deep seabed a "common heritage," moreover, is to impose new controls there as well. These would reduce the existing freedom of private or national entrepreneurs in order to spread the expected mineral bencfits to states not in a position to exploit them themselves.

This drive to write new rules for the sea results from the world's growing hunger for the sea's resources, from the increasing sophistication of the technology with which to exploit these resources, and from the growing likelihood that nations striving for them will take arms if law is not first applied. Unsurprisingly, it is those nations with long coastlines, plentiful resources near their coasts (both in the water and under the seabed; and advanced technology which are in the strongest position to get what they want from the high seas. More than

A pattern of international law, replacing any other country, the United States has all three. But this does not mean it can go it

> With its great navy and its global political role, the United States needs the right of continued, politically uncluttered transit through the various international straits which would fall within one or another nation's territorial waters under a 12-mile territorial-sea rule. This is a major goal for the American negotiators at Caracas.

Fishing is a knotty problem. Japanese and Russian "distant-water" fleets have grossly overfished haddock and salmon stocks, for example, off the American coast. But the United States has been reluctant to invoke a 200-mile economic zone because its own tuna and shrimp fleets fish within 200 miles of other nations' shores. Washington is now ready to accept the 200-mile concept but it wishes to keep some fisheries open to its tuna and shrimp fleets and, most important, to ensure that effective conservation and resource management measures are adopted all around.

As to a deep-seabed international regime to extract minerals for the "common heritage," the United States would have the new authority to simply license the exploiters and distribute the licensing revenues. But the Chinese, seeking a Third World leadership role, would arm the authority with the power to do the exploiting itself.

American fishing, gas and oil, mining and maritime operators naturally have a strong commercial interest in any new international rules of the sea, just as the U.S. government has a strong diplomatic and military interest. These interests, complex and sometimes contradictory, are all reflected in the American proposals at Caracas. Some mining and fishing groups have persuaded Congress to draft legislation that would, if enacted, pre-empt international decisions on crucial issues. Wisely. Congress has not acted on this legislation. The United States, as much as any nation, needs the cooperation of others on the high seas. It can hardly expect to get such cooperation - indeed, its example will only breed conflict-if it acts

International Opinion

Ossification and Russia

It would be odd if the Soviet Union were immune to trends that are so clearly visible in other parts of the world. The only question is how easily the system is going to be able to cope with them. It would, however, be a mistake to exaggerate the degree of ossification in the Soviet Union. While the regime screws down the clamps on obvious dissenters, it is in some ways less ruthless and less sure of itself than it was. It makes concessions to internal and external pressure groups, and often shows signs of reaching decisions by committee and compromise. This is a sign of weakness by former standards, but if it is true that tough governments can bring about their own destruction it may also be true that less tough governments allow some seeds of regeneration to sprout in the interstices of power. -From the Times (London).

Portuguese Territories

Gen. Spinola's speech (on decolonizing Portugal's African territories] officially breaks with a long tradition of immobilism. and it contributes to the dynamics of a necessary peace and a desirable cooperation. In this sense, it is fair also to qualify it as historic. The obstacles, numerous and complex, which mark the route of the Portuguese territories' accession to an authentic independence are not yet overcome. But the movement toward peace seems irrevers-

Democracy has been restored in Greece after a seven-year itch of military dictatorship. This ld not have come so abruptly had not the departed junts behaved over Cyprus with a stupidity rare even by its own standards. Democracy has likewise been strengthened in Turkey by that country's success in the Cypriot showdown And whatever comes in Cyprus itself, once true peace is restored there, can only be welcomed by NATO.

Fantage Point

Naples is a useful vantage point from which to judge this affeir since it is here that AFSOUTH acronym for NATO's most mportant Mediterranean command) is located. Of the five nations whose forces are commanded by AFSOUTH, two (Greece and Tutkey have just been at war.

A third (Britain) is directly involved in Cyprus where it maintains bases; a fourth, the United States, provides the Sixth Fleet on which the Mediterranear relies in case of war; and the fifth. Italy, is wholly exposed during any serious conflict in thus famous inland sea.

For an instant it looked as if. only Russia could benefit from the Cyprus affair. However, Muscow acted with prudence and propriety and made no moves to upset the uneasy balance when Greece and Turkey, without consulting AFSOUTH, deployed some NATO-committed forces to face each other.

The paramount gain for the West has been in Greece. The return of the civilian Caramanlis government, led by a strong man and experienced ministers, is an overwhelming plus, NATO should soon set about restoring the Greeks to the status of full political partnership.

Junta Disliked

American military nelp had been canceled by a Congress which heartily disliked the junta. It can now be hoped that eitner the current aid bill can be given a last-minute amendment from the floor or that an amendment may be tacked to some other pending bill to avoid delay in restoring assistance.

The Greek forces need beefing up. Some of their best officers were eased out by the digratorsnip. But it is hoped here that the previous vigor can be restored to NATO's southeastern (Greek-Turkish) sector.

Polygraphs, Anyone?

By William F. Buckley Jr.

NEW YORK-Every now and again you hear talk about lie-detector tests. It lasts for a while, and then usually subsides, Talk of it is an expression of a general mocd of skepticism. It is now revealed that in a moment of acute concern over the apparent disestablishment of government secrecy, President Nixon summoned two aides and suggested that they come up with a classification so secret that only numbered copies of the supercharged documents would be put into circulation, to men and women whose names were recorded. Then if a particular secret leaked, everyone whose name appeared in the learer as having had knowledge of that document would be lined up, as if to receive a vaccination from a doctor, and given a lie-detector test. The idea, as we know, did not flower. In-stead, a few taps were installed, and the plumbers were recruited.

Last summer, prominent newspapers antagonistic to former Vice-President Agnew agreed editorially that the leaks against him were damaging, and that they violated his constitutional rights. Under that kind of pressure, 134 Instice Department employees, including all the prosecutors, signed affidavits swearing that it was not they who were leaking the information to the press. But no lie-director tests were administered and one cannot reasonably conclude other than that at least one of these gentlemen was lying.

A Proposal

A few weeks ago Dr. William Shockley wrote to make a quite startling proposal. We were to engage in an exchange of opinion on television, and he suggested that before the program begin, he be wired up by a polygraph expert. It would require then only a short explanation to the viewing audience, that if they saw the indicator humming along behind Dr. Shockley, out of his line of sight, while he spoke, suddenly bolt up across the solid line, why then Dr. Shockley was telling an untruth. I did not invite Dr. Shockley to make the arrangements because I do not see that 'truth" or "untruth" enters into what Dr. Shockley was invited to discuss. But the idea intrigues the necessary return to Turkey me, and one naturally wonders

One recalls a year ago the appearance of Patrick Buchanan before the Ervin committee. The press had widely publicized, on the shortest notice, his impending appearance before the committee, attributing a feast of misdeeds to him about which he would be challenged. Those leaks came from someone on the committee, and one wonders what would have been the reaction of Chairman Sam Ervin to an invitation to submit the committee members, and the chief of staff, there and then, to a polygraph?

Rely on Evidence

The main trouble, of course, is that to ask someone to do it is to register your disinclination to take his word for something. take it that a more sophisticated trouble is that some people do not react as neatly to a polygraph as others. This is so less in response to such questions as, "Did you rob the bank?" as to such questions as, "Did you leak the information about Agnew to the press...?" The mind is infinitely subtle, and one supposes that a practiced self-server would quickly decide that "leak" was not the right word for what he had done: and so on. So that we probably will not arrive at a handy mechanical means by which to judge whether people who do not know, what the truth is, are telling the

Which means that we shall have to rely on evidence. Which means that such evidence has got to be collected. Which means sleuthing. And surveillance. And, yes, under certain circumstances. bugging. One wonders: Would itbe more or less humiliating to a member of the staff of the National Security Council to be told that his telephone would be tapped (by a bonded tapper), or that he would be expected to take a polygraph test once a month and reply to specific questions?

The challenge, of course, is to avoid having to do either. That is the mood, when people suggest that lie detector tests be standard equipment on talk shows. Come to think of it, maybe Sony could merchandise an attachment which would let us flick on a "Truth when listening to our favorite news commentator or politician. Moscow Arms Talks limits on offensive strategic nuclear arms, the Moscow summit talks may turn out to have been a decisive, negative turning point. There are three considerations:

what was agreed, what was not achieved, and what President Nixon and Secretary of State Kissinger have said about the strategic-arms part of the talks,

The agreements covered three matters: A treaty prohibiting underground weapons tests exceedthe anti-ballistic missile treaty under which both sides would be limited to one rather than two ABM sites, and an agreement that the delegations of the two sides will meet promptly to begin negotiation of an interim agreement on limiting offensive nuclear arms extending through 1985. The first two would appear to accomplish little of strategic importance and the third would appear to acknowledge a serious setback to previous hopes...

Not Permanent

What was not achieved was a permanent agreement to replace the first interim agreement on offensive arms, an objective that the two sides at the last summit meeting, in Washington in 1973, had set themselves to accomplish this year. Nor was it possible to secure agreement on an equitable partial measure limiting deploy-ment of the new family of Soviet offensive strategic-weapons sys-

The President in his television appearance on his return from Moscow said that new patterns were emerging between the United States and the Soviet Union "that hold out to the world the brightest hopes in a generation for a just and lasting peace that all can enjoy." The accomplishments at Mescow would appear to warrant a more modest appraisal

The proposed treaty to prohibit underground tests—it requires Senate ratification—undoubtedly has positive political aspects. There was, however, inadequate time in Moscow to work out agreed criteria to distinguish between nuclear-weapons tests and peaceful nuclear explosions, and agreed measures to assure adequate means of verifying such a distinction. This task remains to be accomplished. Finthermore, the strategic value of an agreement not to test after March 15, 1976, weapons of a yield greater than 150 kilotons the equivalent of 150,000 tons of TNT—is doubtful. The Russians have tested, or will have tested by the starting date of the ban, warheads they need for their new family of offensive weapons,

Tests

What would be cut off would be subsequent weapons tests above that threshold, A principal purpose of such tests would appear to be further improvements in the ratio of the explosive power of a warhead to its weight.

The strategic significance of such improved ratios for a force having the large throw-weight potential of the Soviet missile force is not readily apparent, while such improved ratios could be significant for a force with smaller throw-weight. (Throwweight is the weight a missile can carry to a target). As for the proposed amendments to the ABM treaty, there are again certain positive aspects: One

ABM site on each side would appear to be better than two. However, the defense either of a nation's capital or of an intercontinental ballistic missile silo field limited to 100 ABM interceptors is not of major strategic significance The risk in the ABM treaty is rather the difficulty of distinguishing between an ABM interceptor and a modern surfaceto-sir-missile (SAM) interceptor. From that standpoint, the radar complexes around Moscow have a greater strategic potential than do those at Grand Forks, N.D.

What gives greater grounds for concern, however, is the summit decision that the delegations of both sides will now direct their efforts not toward negotiating a permanent agreement limiting offensive nuclear systems to replace the interim agreement but toward negotiating a limited agreement covering the period to 1985.

This decision would appear to undercut the positions taken by the U.S. delegation at Geneva under presidential instruction and to favor the Soviet positions. In essence the United States sought in Geneva a permanent agreement based on the concept of equality, or essential equiva-lence, in basic verifiable limits. tions on those offensive weapon systems whose principal role is strategic, with a provision not to WASHINGTON—For those who circumvent the agreement through have seriously hoped for the deployment of other nuclear long-term, balanced and effective systems not specifically limited. To avoid the necessity of the United States building up to Soviet levels to achieve essential equivalence, the United States delegation proposed phased reductions to lower levels.

Soviet Strategy

I believe the Soviet strategy i. to deal with each segment of the problem piecemeal, nailing down one piece after another in a manner favorable to Soviet interests ing 150 kilotons; amendments to and using all effective measures -diplomatic, propagandistic and through enhanced military capabilities-to bring pressure on the United States to settle for such piecemeal agreements. Among the issues the Soviet side considers already settled are the inequalities in numbers of launchers and silo dimensions provided by the interim agreement and their right to put muitiple warheads on a substantial proportion of their more numerous and larger missiles.

Their current interest in a threshold nuclear-test ban .the treaty involving underground tests), agreement to forego a second ABM site, and a limited agreement to cover the period to 1985 is consistent with such a plecemeal strategy and with irhibiting a U.S. response to the imminent deployment of the Soviet Union's new and much more effective family of offensive strategic systems.

In the absence of any agrecment by the Soviet side to substantially alter its past positions and there have been no indications of such a change-I see small prospect of the continuing Geneva talks on limiting strategic arms making progress toward a balanced and substantially helpful outcome In his news conference in Moscow, Mr. Kissinger implied that responsibility for lack c greater progress rested equally on both sides, which "have to convince their military Establishments of the benefits of restraint, During the 30 years since I first

Furthermore, it is my judgment that the U.S. defense Establishment, because of its particular national security responsibility. has been more deeply concerned there be balanced and eifective arms-control measures than other parts of the government.

—Letters— Cyprus Solution?

As an American citizen of non-Greek origin, married to a Greek and resident in Greece for many years, I have often wondered if the best solution of the festering Cyprus-Turkish problem would not be an agreement similar to the 1923 Exchange of Populations Treaty of Lausanne between Greece and Turkey-promulgated by two of the world's great statesmen, Eleftherics Venizelos and Kemal Ataturk and the 100,000 Turkish residents of Cyprus be exchanged for a similar number of Greeks resident in Turkey? And lest anyone be appalled at the thought of the dislocation of 200,000 individuals, let it be stated that in 1923, 1.5 million Greeks in Turkey were exchanged for the close to 1 million Turks living in Greece. And peace reigned, and treaties of commerce and friendship were signed. Mrs. JOHN ANTONIADES.

shallot is a native of the idle East, unknown to the anits and first brought to Eue by the Crusaders, who disered it in Ascalon, from which ook its name mothing is said ut the scallion, whose name is n closer to Ascalon; and in same breath it quotes as aurity for the Ascalon origin 17 the Elder, who, if I am mistaken, antedated the isaders. (So did Charlemagne,) included in the list of vegeles he wished to see developed nis kingdom one which seems have been the shallot-unless was the scallion). That the are different, and that both e known to the ancients, ns to be established by a plet of Martial, which reads:

If envious age relax the nuptial knot, Thy food be scallions, and thy feast shallot. is true that one translator.

Martial has substituted the y d "mushrooms" for "scallious" .hls verse, but it may be susled that this was a desperate mpt to reconcile Martial's r statement with the transr's mistaken assumption that lions and shallots are the

Distinctions -

The fact is that both scallions shallots exist, and neither them is the same species 25

lion is Allium fistolosum, the shallot Allium ascolonicum. The easiest way to distinguish between them is to describe the scallion as buibless, propagated from seed, and the shallot as bulb producing, propagated by division; but a disorderly nature, which frequently baffles human attempts to arrange its creations in neat categories. occasionally makes hash of these distinctions.

Ascalon, one of the five royal cities of Canaan, the birthplace of Herod the Great, was indeed known for an onion-like plant 3,000 years ago, but nobody knows whether it was the shallot or the scallion or something else-maybe only the common onion, which the same area produces today, though Ascalon has disappeared. In any case, both plants took their name from Ascalon, via the Low Latin ascolonia, which may have originally covered both the shallot and the scallion. This became escalone in Old Freuch, which became eschaloigne or escaluigne in the 12th century, and in Taillevent's 14th-century "Vivandier," escaloigne. This may have been the point at which it diverged, becoming echalote for the shallot, from which English made shallot and German Schalotte. In the other direction, the Anglo-French scaloun moved through the Middle English scalone to scallion. The Italian scalogno appears to have covered both plants tit also means a certain type of fig1.

Take the shallots first. Whatever may have been grown in Ascalon, by the time Pliny got around to writing about it, the best shallots were reputed to be those of Megara, in Greece. Ovid. who seems to have shared Martial's opinion about this vegetable's effect on virility, advised, "Est the white shallots sent from Megara" for its aphrodistac virties. The shallot may very well have grown in Ascalon, but it is a native of Central Asia, not Asia Minor, having originated in Siberia and perhaps also in Kirgizistan; the origin of scallion is doubtful.

The shallot is much like the onion, but it produces, instead of one large bulb, a cluster of bittle ones. Delicate stomachs can cope with it more casily than with either the onion or garlic; shallot salt is said to have tonic qualities siboule, the chive creekte or for the anemic. The flavor is more subtle than that of the onion: "It perfumes without asserting itself," wrote the 19thcentury French author Charles Monselet. Shallots are the soul of that remarkable sauce known as beurre blanc (white butter) and they enter also into Béarnaisc. It is impossible to make a good piquant sauce without shallots, according to Alexandre Dumas,

Young Onions

The shallots you buy on the market are often not shallots at all, but young onions pulled up in the spring before they have time to form bulbs; the shallot is consequently sometimes called the green onion, adding an element of confusion to the identification of these plants, since this name is also a synonym for the scallion Confusion is increased by the fact that while most of small bulbs detached from the parent stock the Jersey shallot called in French the onion shallot. échalote-oignon). develops from seed, the only one which thus imitates the scallion. The scallion has a counter-exception—the St. James scallion (ciboule Saint-Jacques, Allium lusitanicum; produces no seed. and therefore, unlike the other scallions, but like the shallot is propagated by division alone, It has stiffer, thicker, more numerous and coarser tasting leaves than the commoner scallion. whose flavor in any case is less subtle than that of the shallotor the chive, which also gets into this picture. This is because a peculiarity of the chive 'Allium schoenoprasum) is that it has a hollow stem; and so has the scallion, as is indicated by its scientific name. Allium fistolosum ()istolosum = hollow).

The scallion might be described as an onion which does not form a bulb; the base of the stalk develops only a slight swelling. The attempt to distinguish the scallion from other members of the same group of plants has been pursued doggedly by the French. who created a calegory called cire (academically) or ciboule (popularly) for members of the onion family which do not form bulbs the scallion is cire or ciboulette). This laudable effort was partly defeated, once more, by nature, for while the ciboule commune is bulbless, it has developed a variety with a copperred skin enveloping a bulb, which has had to be named the ciboule commune à bulbe, or the bulbles. bulb, which does not make much

Other Names

Other names for the scallion are, in the French countryside. brelette: in German, Frühlingszwiebel (spring onlon), and in English the spring onion, the green onion or the Welsh onion -Webster's dictionary, curiously enough, which denies that the exists, grants it its scientific name, Allium fistolosum, under this alias.

A few cousins of these plants are difficult to place accurately. The Canadian catawissa in French, the grande ciboules is probably classifiable as a shallot: produces tiny bulbs, excellent for pickling. But is the Egyptian shallot 'échalote d'Egyple' a shallot? Or a kind of garlic. since it is also called Spanish garlic in French and giant garlic in English? Or an onion (in German it is the rye onion Rockenbolls)? Or is it, as some experts suggest, a sort of leek? In any case its scientific name is Allum schorodoprasum.

The German Rockenbolle has entered French as rocambole and Euglish too, for that matter). Ponson du Terrail chose Rocambole for the name of the hero of a prodigiously successful 19th-century work. The Exploits of Rocambole." no doubt to take advantage of the figurative meaning the word had acquired in French, that of the liveliest or spiciest element in any situation, obvious analogy with the character of this food. From this point, rocambolesque in French progressed to describe bad practical joking, and finally to characterize the extravagant or the incredible. The shallot its more common name provided a title for a novel of Montmartre which appeared just before World War I. "L'Echalote," by Jeanne Landrii. And just to affirm the affinity of this family of plants for creativity, the chive gave a heroine and a name to an operatia for which Reynaldo Hahn evidently desired to suggest a rustic atmosphere.

Asian Dollar Market Showing Signs of Strain

Singapore Slows Influx of Banks

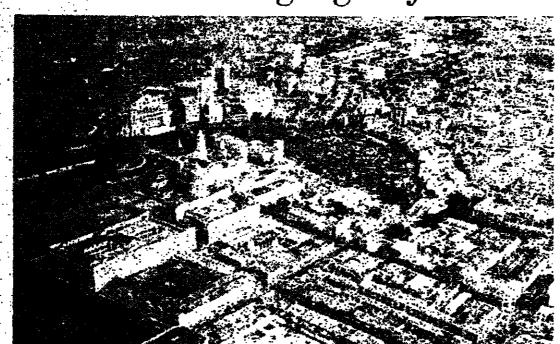

By John Quirt SINGAPORE (NYT) - Singapore's location political sta-bility, tax advantages and other economic inducements transformed this is land republic into the undisputed hub of Asia's dollar market—the Oriental version of the Eurodollar market which has quadrupled in size sine 1971 to about $6 billion. But signs of strain are beginning to appear.

Singapore's growth as an international money center has indeed been awesome. The old-feshion-ed street stalls of the Chinese and Indian money changers along Shenton Way have been replaced by skyscrapers built to accommodate the Western-style offices of dozens of European, Japanese and U.S. banks.

To bring in banks and money, the semisocialist regime of Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew has cultivated an image of political stability, courted expansionminded foreign companies, liberalized immigration rules for banking personnel and eliminated a withholding tax on earnings from foreign-owned deposits (gaining an important advantage over Hong Kong, which still imposes a 15 per cent tax).

No Reserves Needed Singapore has also done away with reserve requirements and exchange controls on overseas dollar deposits, lowered income taxes and stamp duties on merchant banking transactions and licensed 46 banks-to do business in offshore dollars.

As a result, dollar suppliers, including multinational corporations active in this area, have begun

COLOGNE, July 30 (AP-DJ) .- in the bank. He said that after The chief foreign exchange dealer of Bankhaus Herstatt is sharply at odds with the bank's main shareholder over events preceding Hentatt's collapse on June 25. Chief dealer Dany Dastel broke his previous silence to strongly deny charges by Hans Gerling, Herstett supervisory board charman and main shareholder, that were hidden from the bank's leadership.

Mr. Dattel charged in a television interview that his supervisors knew about big losses as early as the end of April and that he was ordered to increase his activities His statement contradicted a press release issued last week by the Gerling group of companies that indicated Hans Gerling and general partner Iwan Herstatt did not find out about the losses until June 11. The Gerling group is headed by Hans Gerling. Mr. Dattel portrayed Herstatt as a bank that "lived" solely off its foreign exchange earnings and that carried out a "consciously active" dealing policy involving more than 60 billion deutsche marks of turnover a year.

Bankhaus Herstatt was ordered into liquidation by West German authorities shortly after they found it had lost at least 477 million DM in forward foreign exchange dealings.
In the interview, Mr. Dattel disputed an assertion that Iwan Herstett and Bernhard Graf von der Golts, a high-ranking Herstatt executive, had considered firing him after they discovered in January that he was involved in a number of unrecorded transactions. He said that he was named in January as a deputy director as a reward for his services in foreign exchange.

The assertion that consideration was given to firing Mr. Dat-tel was attributed in the Gerling press statement to Mr. Von der Golb.

Mr. Dattel said that by the end of April there was a loss of 400

We are, in effect, an appendage of the Eurodollar market, a net importer of funds. And it has been disturbing recently to find that money which normally would have come here from Europe has been staying at home. In London they have been saying: 'Oh, yes, Singapore. that's a bit far away right now. We'd feel better keeping these dollars in Europe."

While conceding that imported Eurodollars are pivotal for the local capital market. Mr. Heerding said he expects no difficulty in obtaining funds to meet his commitments between now and the end of the year. He acknowledges that lately the Bank of America and a few other hanks that deal both locally and in offshore dollars have been able to take in Arab oil money, lend it to Japanese and other banks in the region, and increase their

Mr Burns, in a strong neletie of Fed monetary policy, said that tight money and credit is necessary along with a reduction of inderal spending and pulier fliessures to end inflation.

Carrying the same message to Congress was President Nixon's outgoing Economic Council charman. Herbert Stein, Mr. Jurns testified before the House Banking Committee and Mr. Stein appeared before the Joint Ercnomic Committee.

Mr. Burns said present monetary policy had resulted in a growth rate of about 6 her cent over the past year in one money supply, which he said "is still too high for the stability of are) age prices over the longer term. But moderation in the growth rate of money and credit supplies must be achieved granually to avoid upsetting effects of the real economy." he said.

"A return to price stacility will require a national commitment to fight inflation this year and in the years to come." he said.
"Monetary policy must play a key role in this endeavor and we in Federal Reserve recognize thes fact.

He added that "te cannot realistically expect any lasting decline in the level of interest rates until inflation is brought under control." The Fed chairman also reiterated his view that the federal budget must be brought into "better balance" if the inflation problem is to be solved and interest rates brought down to reasonable

Now, he told the committee, he sees the inflation rate at the end of 1974 higher than he had before "although we continue to believe it will be significantly lower than in the first half of the year."

Mr. Stein offered no new solutions but called for continued restraint on monetary policy and government spending for a long approach. Mr. Stein said, "The basic lesson of our decade of inflation is that a policy of firm restraint on the expansion of demand must be continued stead-

NASDAQ index of stocks traded over-the-counter fell by 0.19 Bond markets took yet another battering following Arthur Burns's statements to the House Banking Committee.

The market, which has been laboring under the Ped's tight monetary policy for over a year, took his comments as a sign that the Fed would move to tighten money supply over the coming months.

Selling, and falls, were again concentrated in the longer-dated issues, with losses in this area ranging to one full point in government securities and 1 1/4 points in corporates,

Profit-taking produced an erratic market on the Chicago Board of Trade, After successive gains in recent weeks most commodity contracts opened higher, but fell sharply in early trading. Scybsans and corn opened at the limit and declined sharply, but regained strength to ciose at muxed levels

THE WAR BETWEEN THE TATES By Alison Lurie. Random House. 372 pp. $6.95.

Reviewed by Sara Sanborn

FOR 10 years, Alison Lurie has stare adoringly at him with regularly produced insightful and witty novels about The Way We Live Now, drawing on a large talent for social verisimilitude. In her fifth book, with the effortless grace of a real trunic wift. she has raised The Way We Live Now into the Human Comedy. "The War Between the Tates" is a novel not only to read, but to reread for its cool and revealing mastery of a social epoch, a near-perfect comedy of manners and morals to put on the shelf next to "Vanity Fair" or "The Egoist."

Miss Lurie has been working steadily toward "The War Be-tween the Tates." I have not read her first book, "Love and Friendship." But the other three—"The Nowhere City" (1965), "Imaginary Friends' (1967), and "Real People" (1969)—are all variations on the same theme and the same device for bringing it to life. Miss Lurie's protagonists are always academics or writers; well-read and well-controlled, thoughtful and successful, people of good taste—and hence people especially susceptible to the Call of the Wiki and the perfectly rational processes of self-deception. In each case, their carefully-constructed lives and self-images, glowing with conscious enlightenment, break up on the rocks of the irrational, to which they have been lured by the stren song of sheer sexual energy. The resulting splinters reveal the real nature of the personal material In. each book, the protagonists leave home and journey into the bizarre, where they learn their own mettle or come to terms with their lack of it.

"The War Between the Tates" represents a breakthrough into ease in the handling of the au-thor's favorite themes. No one goes anywhere; the Tates meet their destiny and the truth about themselves in their own backyard, on their daily rounds.

Erica Tate is a tall, beautiful, serious housewife of 40, incressingly depressed and perplexed at what her life has become. The bulldozers chew closer and closer to her restored country farmhouse, turning Jones Creek Road into Glenview Homes; every day the "monstrous lodgers," two rude, sullen adolescents who have replaced her charming children. grow more and more hatefuland her husband Brian blames her. A Radeliffe graduate, Erica wants to take a part-time job at the university.

Brian opposes the job; he does not want strangers taking care of The Children, Further, Brian suspects that the psychology professor, no friend of his, who in-tends to hire Erica really just wants "to have Brian's attractive wife working for him, and be able to order her around."

Such issues are important to Brian: At 43, he has falled to become the great man he was clearly intended to be. He holds an endowed chair in political science the kind that offers no decrease in teaching or increase in salary -and he holds himself ready to give his opinion, write position papers, serve on commissions. Only somehow nobody asks. Brian, who secretly fancies himself George Kennan, the master strategist thinks he knows why: He is shorter than the average man and three inches shorter than Erica.

Brian is ready for Wendy Gahaghan, the hippie graduate student who visits his office to the look of a succubus. The whole complicated pattern of alliances and strategies works itself out against the background of the other war in the late sixtles, the war that is always somewhere in the characters' minds and that has already changed forever the way of life they knew.

In their battles with their teenaged children, Erica and Brian see themselves as the South Viet-namese government, merely try-ing to preserve a peaceful status quo against wily invaders who are taking over their terrain, "moving in troops and supplies, depleting natural resources and destroying the local culture." To the chil-dren, the position is reversed; Brian and Erica are the invaders: the large, brutal, callons Americans. They are vastly superior in material resources and military experience, which makes the war deeply unfair; and they have powerful allies like the Corinth Public School System."

Thus Alison Lurie has found a stingingly successful artistic use for the Vietnam war, as a metaphor for the sometimes dead! generational and sexual battle (which became more and more of a "hot" war in the late sixties:. and for the painful ways of sell-knowledge. Like the Americans, Erica and Brian "have been favored by environment and heredity, and wish to think themselves worthy of their good fortune." How they learn to know their own characters betterwithout losing character alto-gether in the alternative cultures offered them is the matter of this novel.

BRIDGE_

Almost all good players would make 10 tricks playing in four hearts on the diagramed deal, but South's expertise produced an overtick, vital in board-a-match scoring. The deal was played during the American Contract Bridge League's summer nationals in New York South and West both bid a major suit as shown, and North and East contributed single raises. South issued a game invitation by hidding three chibs-three hearts would have been simply competitive and North made 2 good decision by jumping to four hearts. His ace and king were both key eards, and he could foresee a club ruff, so his hand was worth three tricks.

West led the spade king, and when he continued the suit South rufled. He cashed the king and ace of hearts, and ruffed another spade. Next he entered dummy with the club king to reach this position:

NORTH 49 77 ♦ 8763 WEST 4 Q6 ♥ — ♦ Q542 SOUTH Ó AK18 A A O 9

By Alan Truscott The last spade was led from dummy, leaving East in a quandary. It was clearly foolish to ruff, and if he had discarded a chip, South would have ruffed, cashed his minor suit winners and ruffed a club for 11 tricks. . The two sure tricks for the defense, the two red queens, would have appeared simultaneously at the 13th trick East therefore discarded a diamond, but South had an answer for that one. He ruffed the spade, cashed the club acc and followed with the ace and king of diamonds. When East ruffed and perforce led a club, the ninc was finessed, and dutumy's diamond losers disappeared on clubs.

The home run hitter was Babe Ruth, not Henry Aaron, which proves again that the more things change, the more they remain the same for anybody with 700 home runs. Anybody with that many homers has never been offered the opportunity to manage a major-league team. When he hit his 715th home run, Henry Aaron probably thought he finally had broken the chains of Babe Ruth's lore. But in mentioning his disappointment at not being asked to manage the Atlanta Braves last week, he created another connection. Hopefully, he will not belabor his frustration, as the Babe did for a decade. He was linked with nine of the 16 clubs of that era as a managerial candidate. But the team that he understandably wanted to manage the most, the New York Yankees, ignored him. His frustration has been documented Robert Creamer in "Babc," biography as classic as its subject.

His frustration began, as Aaron's did, when his own team didn't consider him. After the death of manager Miller Huggin, the Yankees sciected Bob Snawkey, once a minor-league manager, for the 1930 season. The Babe resented being ignored. Twelve months later Shawkey was discharged, Joe McCarthy was hired and the Babe was

Did they have to go to the National League for a manager?" he asked.

An Owner's Excuse

McCarthy would guide the Yankees to eight pennants and seven World Series championships but at the time he had just been dismissed as the Chicago Cubs' manager. The Babe asked for an audience with Jake Runpert, then the Yankees' co-owner, and Ed Barrow, the general manager. Ruppert explained that he didn't believe in playing man-

"Speaker was a playing manager," the Babe argued. "Cobb was a playing manager. Hornsby was a playing manager.

In the seasons that followed, McCarthy soon was established. Before the 1934 season, the Yankees' front office asked the Babe if he wanted to manage the Newark team in the International League, the top farm club,

"I'm a big leaguer," the Babe said. "Why should I have to Cobb and Speaker didn't." He also remembered that the Washington Senators had named Joe Cronin as their manager when Cronin was 26 years old. "How about that kid in Washington?" added the Babe in his annoyance. "Did he have more experience than me?"

Boston Politics Around that time, other teams

NEW YORK, July 30 (NYT), Boston Red Sox, the seam that Babe had pitched for at the start of his career. During the 1932 season James Michael Curley, the Boston politician, prompted the Red Soz owners to approach but the Babe declined. "Babe felt." Creamer writes, "that he was still a force on the Yankers. He did not want to leave the club nor is it jukely that the Yankees would have let him go then-at least not charply." The following year Tom Yawkey nurchased the Red Sox and Wan:ed to hire the Babe but Eddie Collins, the Red Sox general manager, persuaded him not to. At various times the Babe was rumored to be under consideration by the Chicago White Sox, once in a trade for Al Simmons that never materialized, as well as the Cleveland Indians and the Cincinnati Reds.

Perhaps his best opportunity occurred after the 1933 season. Frank Navin, the owner of the Detroit Tigers, actually negotiated a trade with Barrow but Navin wanted to talk to the Babe before completing the deal. Name asked the Babe to come to Detroit but the Babe had planned a barnstorming trip to Honolulu. "I'll call him when I get back," the Babe said.

By the time the Babe got back, Navin had hired Mickey Cocisrane as his manager. Yawkey later renewed his interest but Collins again prevailed by acquiring Cronin as manager. That created an opening in Washington but when Clark Grufith offered the Babe only $15,000. plus a share of the gate rectipts. the Babe demanded $30,000 and Griffth bired Bucky Harris. After the 1934 season Connie Mack, within a few months of his 75th birthday, was searching for a successor to himself as the Philadelphia Athletics' manager. The entrepreneur of a barnstorming tour of Japan, he named the Babe as the manager of the all-star team. When factions developed. Mack remained as the A's manager.

"I couldn't have made Babe manager." Mack explained. "His wife would have been running the club in a month." Not long after that Judge Emil Fuchs, the owner of the Boston Braves, arranged to acquire the Babe as an "assistant manager" and player for the 1935 season, with the possibility that he would replace Bill McKechnie as manager the following year. It never worked out. When he was released, he claimed he had been double-crossed. Halfway through the 1938 season the Brooklyn Dodgers hired him as a coach. But when the Dodgers dismissed Burleigh Grimes as manager, they hired Leo Durocher. never had even a remote chance after that. "I'd still like to manage." the Babe once reflected. "I hope to stay in baseball all my life. But there's nothing in sight."

The rap on Ruth was, as Ed Barrow first mentioned "How can he manage other men when he can't even manage himself?" But nobody can say that about were interested, particularly the Henry Aaron's candidacy.

NFL Players Talk Optimistically

By Nancy Scannell

WASHINGTON, July 30 (WP) Expressing optimism that the 23-day-old strike by the National Footbail League Players Association could be resolved soon, representatives of the players union me: yesterday for the first time in a week with federal mediators. Although the players declined comment after the 1-hour 20minute session at the Labor Department, the government's chief mediator, W.J. Usery jr. said he had "a very good discussion with the players.

Usery, head of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, refused to discuss specifics of the meeting, noting he must also meet this morning with representatives of the owners' NFL Management Council. The owners and players are scheduled to meet this afternoon. The purpose of the session.

Usery said, was "just to talk with the players themselves... to fully understand their positions and thinking on how to proceed. We want hard good-faith bargaining—that's what we desire and are working for.

"There comes a time to get every strike over with and we hope to get this one over with

Franz Beckenbauer, once the prince of attacking sweepers, scarcely crossed the half-way line in the final. And where was the Netherlands's attacking sweeper?

Ajax has one, we know, and Stoke City will find it out on Sept. 18 when the clubs meet in the UEFA Cup. His name is Horst Blankenburg; he is a West German, and the Dutch would have liked to naturalize him. Arie Haan, who dropped back from midfield to in Blankenburg's role in the World Cup, played his own role What he did was play in, rather than behind, the back four, and it was his lack of defensive ability which allowed Bonhof to go around him to set up the winning West German goal

Kovacs also says that the South Americans admit that the Europeans have surpassed them, that they will now be importing Euronean coaches to improve, presumably, their stamina, to put them on the right road to "total football." Yet, if Paulo Cesar, who has now joined Olympique Marsellle at a huge fee, and Jairzinho had put away those two easy chances at Dortmund against the Dutch, would we not now be singing another tune?

When Argentina outclassed, outplayed and should have thrashed the Italians in Stutigart, it was not by using "total football." Yet, at the same time, they displayed high versatility, with Heredia continually breaking through from the back four with a facility and effect that would not have disgraced Haan, not to mention Franz Beckenbauer, And though the team nominally fielded four strikers, there was never a lack of personnel in midfield.

On holiday in Sardinia, Gerd (The Bomber) Mueller and his shrewd Bayern Munich manager, Udo Lattek, were interviewed by the Italian press. Lattek, whose team now holds the European Cun, observed that the Italians were wedded to out-of-date which won the European Cup of methods, that their catenaccio structure was superficially the same as the West Germans', but that in West Germany the emphasis was on attack, where in Italy it was on defense. Can the Italian leopards change their spots? There are no doubt many managers who would be glad to do so, but the impatience of the directors gives them little time or chance. Meanwhile, they have the disappointment and humiliation of not competing, for the first time ever, in this season's European Cup. Lazio, banned from European tournaments for a year after its violent excesses in a UEFA Cun match against Ipswich Town, proceeded to win the championship.

Lazio has only itself to blame, yet I must confess that as one who greatly admired the fine work done by manager Tommaso Maestrelliat Lazio, in the dreadfully difficult Roman atmosphere, I am distressed that it should have come to such a pass. Whatever came over Lazio, that torrid night in Rome, when it played

Celebrities Don't Die-They Drop Out of the Register

PARIS (IHT).—If you happen to own a big book entitled Celebrity Register published in 1963 at $25 the copy you know how much real fun a book can be-if it contains about a thousand biographies, each with a snapshot of the hero. as this book does.

A new edition of this book has just come out, with all blographies brought up to date, and with many new celebrities brought in and a few old celebrities put out, but that isn't what I want to write about.

There is a Social Register of course. There is Who's Who.

There are what is known as vanity Who's Whos, generally regional and about people who have come up in the world a little bit, or at any rate have a little more money now than they had 50 years ago when they started working very hard.

There is something called The Pantheon, but getting into that is a procedure I have not investigated superficially, let alone in depth.

There is the telephone book.

There is the Social Security number.

There is the secret file in the offices of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

There is the family album (of photographs from long ago). There is the bought-and-paid-for plot in the cemetery waiting and ready, and that is somewhat the thing I do want to write

Some people believe in death, and some don't.

There has never been a real celebrity who has died. At his funeral, he was not the man in the coffin. It was an imposter, a con artist, a fraud, a hustler, an opportunist, and an all-around championship-rank comedian. But let me go back to the Social Register a moment. Well, come to think of it let me not go back to the Social Registerthe thought of all those people bores me. So let me instead go back to the phone book.

Now, there you have the only real Social Register and Celeb-

The trouble is that the people listed are apparently fictitious, invented by a large American writer along the lines of Thomas Wolfe whose brilliant and magnificent career of 10 fast years was notable for abundance, excess, roaring celebration, buying lots of food and drink and eating and drinking all of it, sorrows far sorrier than young Werther's, joys so unconfined as to be painful, depressing, and far worse than sorrow could ever be.

The people in the phone book just don't ring a bell for any reader of the phone book. They are names, and even if the phone bell does ring and the caller is one of the people in the phone book, it turns out that he's got a wrong number. And he is a little shy about giving his own name, even his own fictitious name, invented for him by Thomas Wolfe, or God, or somebody in the family who said to himself one day, "I'm going to have dignity in my name or I'm going to change it again. He generally says, "Who's that?" And of course you reply, "This is me, who are you?"

And then Thomas Wolfe steps in and takes over-and it suddenly becomes the most lyric summing up of the mysterious nature of the human experience anybody could ever hope to imagine, or for that matter ever hope not to imagine.

They hear one another's voice and softly hang up and think about each other for a long time, but in reality, in literature. in American literature, they don't hang up, they shout at each other, they are annoyed, each thinks the other is a nuisance, and impolite, but they do agree to meet at a convenient 1920s style bar for a drink and little by little, Scott Fitzgerald at work on the man, and Gertrude Atherton or Gertrude Stein or Gertrude of East Alabama at work on the woman, they reach out and hold hands, and somebody talking over a loud speaker at Hisleah calls out, "There they go."

The man turns out to be a lunatic who always wanted to 20 on the stage but was kept back by the office hours as an assistant bookkeeper at a plumbing company, and the woman turns out to be far better looking than Barbra Streisand and with a far better voice who should have become a nun and written songs like that famous one by the Belgian nun-about that nice soul who loved Gcd so much God just had to rush the sun around to the world every morning at precisely the right moment for daybreak.

And again literature has lifted the people in the phone book right snack out of anonymity into the good time and the big time and a 50-50 chance to get into the Celebrity Register itself. If you have the 1963 edition, as I do. A begins with Aaron, Hank. That was before Henry Aaron caught up with and wen past Babe Ruth in the hitting of home runs, but he took his time about it because, "A long time ago, my daddy told me, 'Henry, never hurry unless you have to.'"

In the 1963 photograph Henry Aaron looks a little younger than he does now, but not so much younger that you think I'm getting old. If Henry Aaron is getting old, I am, too. He was born in Mobile in 1934.

The last entry in the book is guess who. Just try. Who with a name beginning with the letter Z or Zed, as some people prefer to put it, would close the fantastic story as told in the 1963 edition of Celebrity Register? Zanuck Zeckendorf, Zerbe, Zimbalist, Zinneman, Zolotow, Zorina? No, but you were close.

The winner and holder of last place is Zukor, Adolph, and there he is smiling as if he had just lived a cool century, which wasn't quite so in 1963, he was then only 91. He is now 101, and still as alert and sharp as the day three years ago he was introduced to Jack Benny and said, "But I thought you died."

In between Henry Aaron and Adolph Zukor there are these other people, each with his name and photograph, but in the 1963 edition a lot of these people have died, and so you won't find them in the new edition which is just out, and that is the thing I am indeed writing about

At the same time I want to put in a word or two edgewise on the people in the new edition who have survived from the earlier edition but just might as well have died for all the use it is to anybody's sense of appropriateness.

In other words, there are people in the 1963 edition as well as in the 1974 edition who should really have been thrilled to get their names in the phone book, and to have let it go at that. They are really dead in both editions, and yet there they are nanging on with their earnest faces or their funeral-parior smiles-smile, you dope, they'll think you're alive. Charity or something equally spurious prevents me from listing an assortment of these strange dead, or never-born people who nevertheless are in both editions of the fantastic book, which I consider very nearly the most entertaining book ever published.

It is all these hot people, you see-faces, names, dates, and everything, and at least 80 per cent of the faces, names, dates and everything are phoney-created, invented, and achieved by the photographer and the publicity agent, and ever afterwards clung to for dear life.

Which brings me to the real topic of this Presbyterian sermon: what happens to a celebrity when he dies?

What really happens to him? Is that all?

He just ups and dies, while Adolph Zukor goes right on living. asking questions, and becoming an Indian? If a celebrity dies, and is put out of the new edition of the Celebrity Register, it is my opinion that he is not a celebrity, never has been, and never will be-let him die a hundred times.

A real celebrity just does not die. And if he is put out of the new edition of the register, that is the consequence of policy, and we might just as well notice that the policy is obsolete, has run out, the last payments were not properly made, and the holders of the policy have neglected to read the small print at the bottom.

I turn the pages of the 1963 book and here are all these people who are supposed to be dead, and are therefore not in the new edition, but they are not dead?

Is Gracie Allen dead? Impossible. Is Louis Armstrong dead? Since when? Peter Arno? Don't be silly. W. H. Auden? Bugs Baer? Tallulah Bankhead? Lucius Beebe? William Bendix? Sherman Billingsley? Marc Blitz-stein? Bill Boyd? Joe E. Brown? Lenny Bruce? Ralph Bunche? And that's just a few names from the Ayes and Bees taken

Well, you say, and you have a right to do so, if they are not dead, what are they?

Before I give you the answer to that question, and the definitive answer to it, once and for all, let me just tell you that a celebrity is a celebrity only to people who are looking for celebrities, to himself he is himself, and one of the first things he notices is that he hasn't got a chance, that there is no way through the world and out of the human experience that does not have the reward of death. And if there is a reward that he wants to avoid during both his lifetime and the lifetime of anybody else who may have known him or have only heard of him or found out a little about him through his work, whatever his work may have been, it is this great big little tiny microscopically molecular reward called death.

Not by choice, but helplessly, a real celebrity uses up his allotted time and as much additional time as he can shoplift or acquire by medical and legal means—to postpone and possibly The answer, then: no sir, no ma'am, no celebrity ever dies, he is only dropped out of the new Celebrity Register.

Well, do they live then? Well, that's another story entirely.

PEOPLE: U.S. Justice Not Blind To Courtroom Attire

Fashion may dictate but the law isn't listening, at least in the United States. An Albany, Oregon. woman, Lynda Haggard, was excused from jury duty because a judge wouldn't let her wear a pants suit in his courtroom. She's taken her case to the American Civil Liberties Union. "I don't feel a woman's judgment is impaired by what she's wearing." said Mrs. Haggard. "I can think just as well with my pants on as with my pants off."

Florida Attorney Ray Sandstrom still refuses to wear a tie. to court despite convictions for contempt—the first in Broward County, the second in Miami Monday. He was fined $500 by Circuit Court Judge Don Satin. who claimed that Sandstrom's polka-dot shirt with open collar and a gold coin hanging on a chain around his neck was in "open disregard" for the dignity of the court. Satin gave the attorney an hour to get a tie and said that he would be fined every time he appeared without one in court. Sandstrom refused to put on a tie or pay the fine-he's appealing. "A tie no more makes me a lawyer than a black robe makes him a judge."

Charles Lindbergh, 72, who made the world's first solo flight across the Atlantic in 1927, has been a patient in Columbia Presbyterian Hospital in New York for a week. The announcement was made Monday by a hospital spokesman who declined to reveal the nature of Lindbergh's illness However, Lindbergh's private secretary said that his boss "had a
